

CSI Aviation makes 'Best for Vets' list

Gary Gerew | Assistant Editor-Albuquerque Business First | Apr 17, 2014

CSI Aviation was ranked among the nation's top 59 "Best for Vets" employers by the Military Times for 2014.

The Albuquerque-based company was ranked 57th, among much bigger company as Verizon Communications, Progressive Insurance, JP Morgan and Wal-Mart.

CSI, however, was the only aviation firm on the list.

"CSI Aviation is very proud to receive this recognition as a 'Best for Vets' company. 60 percent of CSI Aviation's senior leadership and 33 percent of total employees overall, came to us with previous military experience," said Allen Weh, the company's CEO in a statement. "Hiring military servicemen and women is intentional and part of our corporate culture. Veterans bring exceptional professional training and a strong sense of ethics to their work and these attributes are a perfect match for our customers."

Earlier this month, a subsidiary of CSI acquired the Australian airplane manufacturer Seabird Aviation.

