CSI Aviation, based in Albuquerque, New Mexico, has announced two changes to its senior staff. Senior VP of business development Tommy Dunn, who has been with the company since 2002, is being promoted to executive VP. Dunn will assume additional responsibilities as CSI continues to grow, and CSI is pleased to have him in this crucial position going forward. He will oversee all growth related to CSI's medical flight services, air management services and government services for the company.

Additionally, CSI has welcomed former CEO of Great Lakes Airlines Doug Voss to the company as senior VP of MRO. In this capacity, he will support president and COO Rock Collins and advise the VP staff on all maintenance matters and recommend outsourced MRO assistance when necessary, along with cost-effective service vendors.

Established in 1979, CSI Aviation has grown into a global aviation company providing diverse and complex solutions to commercial, group and private individuals, and government customers. It supports aviation requirements for air charter services, aviation logistics and programme management. The organisation also holds FAR Part 135 air carrier operating authority and provides air charter and medical flight services.
